BAER

Accused of Calling Off Conference.

He Refused An Audience With Mitchell.

MINERS' LAWYERS STATE THE SITUATION

EXECUTIVE BOARD NOT CALLED

Argument for Ending Hearing Favored by Baer, But Refused to Meet Mitchell.

Sarantou, Pa., Nov. 27.—The independent operators are pleased with the result of their conference in New York with the vice presidents of the roads, while the result of the visit of the miners' representatives to Washington could not be else than disappointing. Their view of the sudden and surprising turn of affairs is well set forth in a statement issued by Messrs. Darrow and Lloyd, the miners' attorneys, who accompanied Mr. Mitchell to Washington. They clearly indicate that they think the coal road presidents acquiesced in Mr. MacVeagh's plan of settlement out of court and then repudiated him. The allegation that George F. Baer signed the telegram to Chairman Gray of the commission declaring that the big companies were agreeable to the MacVeagh idea of amicable adjustment and that the same man signed the telegram to Mr. MacVeagh in Washington calling off the negotiations is made in the statement.

Statement of Counsel.

The statement is as follows: "The commission adjourned for 10 days in pursuance of an arrangement between the parties to give opportunity for conciliation on account of a telegram which we understood was written by George F. Baer, in the presence of and with the consent of every railroad concerned, and was signed by Wayne MacVeagh. This telegram was written after a careful reading of the tentative agreement which had been prepared and written by counsel of both parties, and which had been submitted to the commission. At the request of Mr. MacVeagh, Mr. Mitchell, Mr. Darrow and Mr. Lloyd went to Washington to consult upon some minor details of the agreement. There was no friction or important disagreement between the parties in the meeting in Washington. Later in the day and after the conference in New York with the independent operators, Mr. MacVeagh received a telegram calling off all negotiations and advising that the matter be settled by the commission in a regular hearing.

"The man who wrote the telegram to Judge Gray stating that the main features of the contract were acceptable was the same man who signed the telegram to Wayne MacVeagh three or four days later, stating that negotiations must end.

"A copy of the statement sent out in the name of the Big Waynes MacVeagh, Mr. Wilcox of the Board ware and Hudson company, Carroll D. Wright and probably M. Baer. We can see no reasons for the expression of any opinion, the facts speak for themselves. We have been ready at all times to consult with any one in interest and make any reasonable adjustment, but we have no anxiety over the case whatever, or its results, and shall be ready for business when the commission meets."

Independents Won Their Point.

While admitting that they did much towards breaking off the negotiations for a settlement out of court, the independent operators do not hesitate to say that they were not required to advance much argument to bring the coal road presidents to their way of thinking. One of the independent operators' committee which went to New York has said: "The situation was like that in the story of the man who said, 'I would not drink unless you force me, but I suppose you are able to force me.' The big companies had come to our way of thinking before we met them."

President Mitchell, District Presidents Nicholls, Duffy and Fahy, and several of the other union officers who are here to attend the commission hearings have been in conference as to the details of the evidence to be presented when the commission reassembles. President Mitchell denied the report that the miners' executive board has been summoned for a conference.

Stricken Blind.

Springfield, O., Nov. 27.—E. K. Edwards, a traveling man of Elkhart, Ind., was stricken blind while in this city. His affliction is attributed to the excessive use of cigarettes.

IN SMOKE

Railway Storehouse Goes Up—A Fire With Large Loss.

Omaha, Nov. 27.—Fire which started at midnight destroyed storehouse No. 7 of the Union Pacific railroad, together with its contents and several freight cars, most of which were loaded with supplies. Purchasing Agent G. W. Griffiths said the building contained fully $150,000 worth of stores, most of which were castings, iron pipe and other heavy material. The building was worth $25,000, making the total loss $175,000. None of the new shops was in danger. The cause of the fire is unknown, but officials believe it was incendiary.

Cable Company Accepts.

Washington, Nov. 27.—The Commercial Cable company has filed with the department of justice a written acceptance of the terms and condition on which the president has consented it may construct a cable between the United States, the Philippines and China. The company therefore will now be given the privilege of use of the soundings taken by the government vessel Nero, which surveyed the Pacific ocean with the purpose of obtaining full information as to the best route for a cable between the Pacific coast and the Philippine Islands and China.

President Commutes Sentence.

Washington, Nov. 27.—The president has exercised executive clemency in the case of Michele Ciorro, who was sentenced in New York city to imprisonment for 10 years for counterfeiting. The sentence is commuted to expire July 1, 1905, which reduces his term of confinement about two and a half years. This action is taken in consideration of valuable information voluntarily given by Ciorro to the secret service officials, which resulted in breaking up a gang of counterfeiters and capturing a number of sets of molds.

Wants Constitutional Convention.

Indianapolis, Nov. 27.—James B. Borens of Terre Haute, senator-elect, will introduce a resolution during the coming session of the legislature requesting congress to call a national constitutional convention to amend the laws for the regulation of trusts. The call must be issued on request of the legislatures of two-thirds of the states, and Mr. Borens will have Indiana as the initiative.

Will Celebrate Peace.

Panama, Nov. 27.—A large meeting was held here at which it was decided to ask the governor to allow one hundred of the principal men of the United States to visit Panama and to celebrate the peace.

Themselves to Get Better Treatment

Political Prisoners Go On a Strike

CONVICTS TREATED WITH AN INCREDIBLE BRUTALITY

DEAD LEFT WITH THE LIVING

In Overcrowded Cells—Convicts Belong to the Educated Class of People.

Victoria, B. C., Nov. 27.—The steamer Olympia, which has arrived from the orient, reports that naval activity still prevails at Hongkong. The China mail says the activity of the naval authorities portends a far more serious work than the demonstration against China on account of the Hunan affair, which was settled by China acquiescing to the execution of the officials responsible for the murder of Missionaries Bruce and Lewis.

From the west Siberian convict settlement at Alexandrovsk news was received that the convicts have gone on strike, refusing all nourishment until they are more humanely treated.

A Shanghai paper gives some horrible details of the treatment of these unfortunates, who are mostly educated men, sentenced for political offenses. The paper says, on the authority of a recent arrival from Siberia, that they are loaded with chains, herded in dark, unsanitary cells and not taken out into the open air for weeks at a time. Infectious diseases have broken out among them, but the sick have not been removed, being left to suffer in the overcrowded prison. The result is that others have been contaminated. Even the corpses of those who succumb are left to rot among the living.

The wardens treat all convicts, healthy and sick alike, with incredible brutality. The convicts carried out the strike resolutely. On the third day many lost consciousness from fasting, but no sufferings induced them to accept food. The condition of convicts in the settlement of Kokshetausk is still worse. Desperate revolts there have been quelled only after much bloodshed.

Big Gun For Coast Defense.

Albany, Nov. 27.—The 16-inch coast defense gun which was manufactured at the Watervliet arsenal has been shipped to the Sandy Hook proving grounds. The gun was loaded on a barge, which will carry it down the Hudson river. Some faint idea of its power can be obtained by the statement that it shoots a projectile weighing 2,370 pounds a distance of 21 miles. If smokeless powder is used it will require 576 pounds, or about 1,000 pounds of black powder. The crude steel from which the gun was assembled weighed 368,000 pounds. It has cost in material, labor and machinery about $150,000. A large amount of new machinery had to be made for the work. One of the largest cranes in the world was built to handle it. Its length is 43 feet 2 inches. The cost was so great that it is doubtful if any more of similar size will be built.

Disorders in Havana.

Havana, Nov. 27.—With the exception of the criminals, all classes of laborers have returned to work, and business generally has resumed its normal condition. The criminals still have a few minor points under discussion. The authorities had begun to think that there was no fear of further disturbances, but there still remains a feeling of animosity in the hearts of some of the more conservative strikers against the military and the police, who are blamed for their refusal to grant a strike by their refusal to allow a strike to be held in the city. Three were made on Monday to do their menial work, and the managers employed at dark in the evening to care for the city.

and two passengers were shot, the motorman being fatally injured.

Jailed on Unusual Charge.

Boston, Nov. 27.—On the charge of sleeping at his post, Archibald S. Rogers, first mate of the ship Kennebec, has been arrested by United States officers and sent to jail until next week, when a hearing will be given. A similar charge has not been preferred in the United States courts for several years. It is charged that as the ship was rounding Cape Horn last August Rogers fell asleep at his post. It is said, however, that nothing was said about the incident until the ship arrived in Boston. Rogers denies the charge.

File Million Dollar Mortgage.

Lexington, Ky., Nov. 27.—A mortgage was filed in the county clerk's office here by the Independent Long Distance Telephone and Telegraph company of Delaware to the National Trust company of Louisville, in trust to secure the issue of $1,000,000, 5 per cent, first mortgage gold bonds for 20 years from Jan. 1 next. The property mortgaged includes the plant in Louisville and equipment, the lines from Louisville through 16 counties in the state.

Presented With Medals.

Washington, Nov. 27.—In consequence of the voluntary act of loyalty on the part of the people of Tubula in ceding to the United States the sovereign rights of that and other islands, President Roosevelt has sent them a message of greeting, and in addition has presented each chief who signed the instrument with a silver watch and chain and a silver medal.

BOYCOTT

The Former Action of Trades Assembly is Rescinded.

Schenectady, N. Y., Nov. 27.—In one of the most exciting meetings in its history the trades assembly declared off the boycott against the Schenectady Railway company. The vote in favor of rescinding was three to one, and the meeting lasted nearly three hours. When the meeting was called to order a motion to rescind the action taken two weeks ago, when the boycott was declared, was made and a long discussion followed during which heated words were freely used. A vote was taken and President Jackson announced that the resolution was lost. There was an outcry at this and another vote was taken. This time the president was unable to tell which side prevailed, and a roll call was made. Those who favored the lifting of the boycott outnumbered the opponents three to one, and without counting the vote President Jackson announced that the resolution to rescind was carried.

Funeral of Mrs. Gore.

Paris, Nov. 27.—The Elia Gore drama reached a fitting climax in the mournfully picturesque funeral at the American church in the Rue de Perry. The occasion was marked by a notable demonstration of sympathy, not only on the part of Americans but by the French middle classes, students, artists and other habitués of the Latin quarter. At 2 o'clock in the afternoon the street in front of the church was packed with students in uniform, costumes, and as the cortege approached they uncovered their heads. The hearse was preceded by a uniformed functionary wearing a blue sash and a cocked hat. The hearse was hung with black and bore the monogram of the deceased. The oak casket was covered with a pall. It was followed by three state carriages, but excepting the first they were empty. The first carriage was occupied by M. Fauguet, representing General Goyard, and several other officials.

He was where he was a short time before he was shot and his desire to obtain a place in the city.

The first member of the gang, who was believed to be three in number, was taken a bond exhibition was heard. Before the band had reached the bank the bandits had secured the money in the outer safe and made their escape.

TRAIN GOING AT HIGH SPEED

Pinioned Under Debris Many on the Train Were Severely Burned—Two May Die.

Greenville, Ill., Nov. 27.—While rounding a curve at high speed a Jacksonville and St. Louis passenger train plunged over an embankment a distance of over 30 feet, and 10 persons, two of whom may die, were injured in the wreck.

Injured: George Enloe, Greenville; Jesse Williamson, Greenville; Clyde McLaeken, Sorento; F. B. Chapman, deputy sheriff at Sorento; Guy O'Hara, Sorento; B. Sturtzloff, Sorento; Thomas P. Boyd, brakeman, Litchfield; H. M. Jackson, Litchfield; James Carter, conductor, Jacksonville; Calie Jones, Sorento.

An overturned stove ignited the debris and many pinioned passengers were severely burned. Conductor Carter and Clyde McRae were so seriously burned that they may die. It is expected the others will recover.

The accident occurred a mile east of Ayers. The locomotive and baggage car remained on the rails. It is believed a truck broke as the curve was being rounded. Physicians were at once summoned and everything possible is being done for the injured.

Decrease of Gold Coinage.

Washington, Nov. 27.—George E. Roberts, the director of the mint, in his annual report says that the coinage mints at Philadelphia, New Orleans and San Francisco were in operation throughout the fiscal year. In number of pieces the coinage of the year has never been exceeded, aggregating 191,419,596, but in value it has fallen in 1902 from $136,349,781 to $93,526,578, this being due to the greater demand for the small denominations. Gold coinage dropped from $99,665,775 to $61,899,572, but the stock of gold bullion on hand increased from $169,219,493 to $121,081,712. The coinage of silver dollars amounted to $19,462,800, subsidiary silver coins to $19,716,592, and minor coins to $2,429,739.

Claim Cheese Caused Death.

El Paso, Tex., Nov. 27.—In the case of the New York Life Insurance company against Mason and Richardson, charged with swindling the company, new and sensational developments were brought out. According to a physician's statement, the fatal illness of a brother-in-law of one of the insurance agents showed symptoms of strychnine poisoning, a matter being the history. The statement further declared that an analysis found in an El Paso plaza and later moved, died of an overdose of cheese caused to kill him, a doctor certifying that he falsified reports.

While other folks were swearin' at the mud the rain had made
Ab Aiken called attention to the dust that it had laid,
An' when the dust was blowin' till it riled their very blood
He told 'em he was thankful that the sun had dried the mud.
Whichever way the weather turned 'twas jest what he was wishin'—
The flood filled up the cistern, an' the drought improved the fishin'.
So, wet or dry, Ab al'ays went his calm, contented way.
An' seven times a week he had a real Thanksgivin' day.

At last a sickness kep' him in his bed for 'most a year,
But not a mutter of complaint did anybody hear.
Indeed, from want he said you'd think he actually chose
To spend his time in bed an' save the wear an' tear o' clothes.
Then when the doctor fin'ly said the end was drawin' nigh
There came a beam of happiness in Abner's dimmin' eye
Which seemed to them who saw it as if he would like to say
That dyin' was the climax of a glad Thanksgivin' day.

I dreamed a dream the other night in which I seemed to see
The sort of Abner Aiken lookin' calmly up at me,
An' I heard the voice of Satan in a long continued wail
As he beat his breast in anger an' in fury switched his tail.
Then I wote an' lay a wonderin' if it possibly was so—
That Ab had taken his abode in regions down below,
An' rebuked the devil of his power by findin' out a way
To turn the night of sheol into glad Thanksgivin' day.

Ab Aiken was the patientest, most uncomplaining man
That ever lived, I call'te, sence the human race began.
He had a way of reasonin' that made the toughest luck
As pleasin' to his notion as a puddle to a duck.
No matter what might happen, he'd make it out to be
About the richest blessin' anybody ever see.
So every time the sun came up it seemed to him to say:
"Good mornin', Ab! I've brung another glad Thanksgivin' day."

I mind the time he broke his thumb above the middle joint—
He told it was a blessin' that it broke at jest that point.
An' when it healed as crooked as ole Brindle's crumpled horn
He said that now it made a handy hook fer shuckin' corn.
You might as well have tried to stop the earth from rollin' round
As try to down his spirits, fer he wouldn't have 'em downed.
No matter what misfortune came, he al'ays made it pay
An' turned the sad occasion into glad Thanksgivin' day.

Our Hearthstone Holiday.

As the Fourth of July is our national holiday of patriotism, so Thanksgiving is our national holiday of the hearthstone. On the one we seek to express and renew our devotion to the Republic and to the liberty it so well guards; on the other we celebrate and cultivate that family unity and affection on which, after all, our institutions rest.

The day has greatly changed its significance and its character since the time when Puritan New England established it in gratitude for a good harvest in a time of great need, and in bigoted protest against the observance of Christmas. These is not less of devout gratitude to the giver of all good now than of old, but there is a more generous happiness, a gentler and more cheerful mind displayed in the celebration. The day has become another Christmas in its joyousness and in its stimulation of human kindness.

Moreover, it is country-wide in its observance now, where before it was a narrowly provincial celebration. In this change we have a reflection of that enlargement of the national spirit which has so happily and so profitably marked the last third of a century. When Thanksgiving feasts are spread in every state, from Maine to Texas, and from Florida to Washington, it means that we are a much more homogeneous people than we ever were before, and that the Republic rests secure upon a foundation of common sentiment which is, for purposes of national welfare a stronger support than any common interest could be.

Let us be thankful for Thanksgiving.

The Tale of the Turkey By BESSIE L. PUTNAM

Copyright, 1902, by Bessie L. Putnam

NO citizen of the United States of America should abstain from turkey on Thanksgiving day.

While the authorship of the above quotation has been questioned, some even attributing it to Washington, it is now generally conceded to have emanated from the lips of Alexander Hamilton. It appears that at a banquet given by a number of congressmen on the first national celebration of Thanksgiving in 1790—and, by the way, we are indebted to the fertile brain of Hamilton for the setting aside of this day as a national holiday—the turkey was conspicuous for its absence. Claim for our largest of game birds, which had served, on other, been served, so acceptably on all feast days since the first Thanksgiving of the pilgrims, was of no avail, and a motion to dispense with the fowl was finally made simply because there seemed no alternative. But this was booted down, Hamilton joining the opposition with the emphatic sentiment above noted.

Since it is strictly an American bird, the name seems a misnomer, probably originating with its first introduction into Europe early in the sixteenth century, when by some means it was supposed to have come from the Ottoman empire.

The Mammoth Bronze, the largest and most popular domesticated variety, is a descendant of the Mexican turkey, indigenous in the Mexican tablelands, found also in New Mexico and Arizona. The prevalent notion that it is crossed with the wild turkey of the eastern slope is denied by the managers of the Smithsonian Institution, who in exhibiting a fine stuffed specimen of the latter at the Pan-American stated that "it is not a progenitor of the domestic turkey."

That the wild nature, like that of the Indian, is never wholly eradicated is most apparent at nesting time. Then the most stupid in appearance of all the denizens of the poultry yard becomes suddenly the most wary and cunning. Unlike the bustling hen, which never lays an egg without proclaiming the fact to the entire neighborhood, Mistress Turkey quietly slips away from the rest of the flock, feeding as she goes, thereby detracting attention from her real purpose. If unmolested, she proceeds by a more or less circuitous route, carefully placing dead leaves or bits of grass or straw over each treasure with her bill, so that unless one finds her on the nest or sees her enter it is almost impossible to discover her secret. Any indication of surveillance increases her secretiveness, and the strategy sometimes adopted to thwart her pursuer is surprising in the extreme.

Hunting the turkey's nest usually falls to the lot of an adult, children being, as a rule, not supposed enough to follow the slender tow to the end. Patience for hours—yes, oftentimes days—is required. One must expect to be led on many detours, perchance to see the hen settle down in a nook quite remote from the nest, having thereby to elude her pursuer. If unsuccessful in this quest, she may stop to turn home, thinking to slip away later unnoticed. The following incident illustrates, perhaps in an extreme degree, her tactics:

A hen had been followed daily for several days, but without success. The grown up boy of the family was quite inclined to make sport of the repeated failures and finally volunteered his services. He watched the hen start along the roadside bordering a triangular wood lot—the route she invariably took. From behind the rail fence he noted her progress, picking here and there, wondering how she slowly, yet evidently alert to the presence of any intruder. Sometimes she appeared suspicious, but would again resume her way in an unconcerned manner. When the apex of the triangle was reached, she was deliberately, after a little maneuvering, worked her way up the adjacent side. Meantime the lad slipped through the low bushes along the third side of the triangle that he might better watch her movements. The gobbler, which had paraded back and forth in the same field during the entire morning, was now unusually profuse with his "gobbles." As the hen reached a point opposite her mate turkey talk was reduced for a few minutes. Then he resumed his former occupation of strutting and gobbling, and she wended her way along unconcerned. As she reached the spot opposite where the spy was concealed she veered directly from her path, walked up to the fence and peeped through at her pursuer, as much as to say, "I knew all about you before I looked." Then she marched home in the most stately manner, leaving the young detective to follow, somewhat crestfallen. Not until the period of incubation was well advanced was her retreat discovered under a spruce in the dooryard, the low growing branches effectually concealing her from view. The morning trips along the roadside were simply a decoy!

If molested while sitting, the turkey protests in a series of hisses, emphasizing these, if opportunity is given without quitting the nest, by savage strokes from her bill. She never cackles, the loudest cry of danger being a series of "quits."

During the first few weeks her young are extremely sensitive to cold and rain. Later they become as hardy as chickens. Some prefer a hen mother, as less liable to ramble, but the turkey better understands the needs of her little ones. Instead of bustling about and firing them out, she moves slowly and rests often, though sometimes leading them a long way from home. If she fails to return at night, search usually reveals her with a neighboring flock.

And this mixing of flocks, by the way, is more productive of neighborhood quarrels than any other feature of farm life. Where both parties are honest it is often managed by marking with leg bands of stout cloth, each family adhering to its own material. But some individuals will insist upon having their number, irrespective of the bill paid to black and white, and when dealing with these well, it is easy for cloth leg bands to get slipped off. The best preventive is liberal feeding morning and evening, to induce a love for home.

Again, a flock of forty or fifty stray turkeys becomes a real menace to the farmer. While they are an effective check to the grasshopper plague, they are also able to tear down and consume a considerable quantity of grain in a short time. Cabbage is a favorite food, and a garden under their jurisdiction is soon demolished.

In autumn, when the young gobblers have nearly reached the size of adults, they practice a curious custom of mutual amercement. One will persistently follow another, its bill thrust nearly or quite in the face of the latter, while it utters a most tantalizing "Keow, keow." This usually terminates in a sharp tussle with beaks, repeated many times during the day. While the members of the flock are usually so neatly mated that no serious results ensue, the persistency with which the process is repeated from day to day becomes quite as annoying as monotonous to the owner.

The mature gobbler is truly a handsome bird, his wattled head glowing red in health, but quickly paling in disease. If angered, the red changes to livid blue, and the child who amuses himself by mocking the bird may receive a good, hard pounding from its wings. The plumage is beautifully bronzed in sunshine, the tail feathers being margined with bands of nearly white. The tail may be erected at pleasure and the wings spread until they touch the ground as it struts back and forth, proud as a peacock, resembling a "covered buggy," as one little maid quaintly described it.

As we feast upon the tender flesh it is pleasant to remember that in many instances the "turkey money" is the chief source of income to the hard-working farmer's wife, and after it has paid the taxes and supplied the necessary winter clothing there may still be a bonus for a new carpet or other wished for luxury. Long live the turkey! Long live the relish of the epicure!

GROSVENOR'S VISION.

Gift Representative Sees "Uncle Joe" Cannon in Speaker's Chair.

From the lips of General Grosvenor of Ohio prophetic words, deeply charged with political significance, fell the other day, says a Washington dispatch to the New York Tribune. Gazing into the far distance beyond the ken of mortal eye, that venerable statesman caught a glimpse of the new house of representatives. Softly stroking his white beard, his glance still directed dreamily toward the far distant future, General Grosvenor made the following revelation of the future as it was vouchsafed to his prophetic eye:

"With my prophetic eye I cannot see any one in the speaker's chair but 'Uncle Joe' Cannon. I see him now pounding the desk with his gavel or sawing the air with that long arm as he expounds parliamentary law. I can only see 'Santa Claus'—and here the general laid his hand on his own breast—'down in his old seat on the floor. I see Dalzell leading the host in a fight for a rule. I see Bailewick in his accustomed place, diplomatic and able. I see Payne and Sherman pursuing their accustomed roles and Littlefield doing business at the old stand. All this I see in my vision, but 'Uncle Joe' in the chair."

And the same effect. "I hear that Jack's fiancée has made him promise to stop smoking." "That so? Well, mine has not said a word about giving up the weed, but our engagement has just the same effect."

"How so?" "Every time I call all the cigars in my vest pocket manage to get crushed, and I of course I don't smoke them."—Baltimore Herald.

"If yesterday was tomorrow, How many times would I have never made The slight mistake That makes in voice of grief."

And the poet would be all unmated. And well, in the face of fate, And when a man is old and sick, A day's rest is a day's rest. "I have never been, but alas, too late!"—Washington Star.

The Ohio State team has also had a successful season, this team however, performing in a manner that ranks them as "in and outers," playing great ball in one game and exceedingly in another.

BLOOD WINE Cures Bright's Disease

Kidney diseases, including Bright's, is gaining an alarming foothold upon Americans, and the percentage of deaths all over the country in 1902 shows a big increase. The slightest tendency to weakness of the kidneys, indicated by lameness, soreness, pains, bearing-down sensation across the small of the back, cloudy, colored, having a sediment or otherwise unnatural appearance of the urine, is sufficient proof that something is wrong. If you take "Blood Wine" for your kidneys it will astonish you with its quick and thorough action. It has a specific action on the kidneys simultaneously with its effect upon the blood, and will check an approaching disease of the kidneys, as well as drive off an old chronic case.

Mrs. M. E. Thayer of North Brookfield, Mass., says:

"I have been troubled with rheumatism and my kidneys for more than ten years, have been without much sleep. My back ached until I was almost crazy, with swelling of the feet and limbs. I tried your 'Blood Wine', and the first bottle helped me. After taking the second bottle my back quit aching, and the fifth bottle brought about a thorough cure."

Mr. John T. Foster, of Manchester, N. H., speaks as thousands speak:

"Blood Wine" is truly a most remarkable medicine. In my case his work has been little short of a miracle. For some time I suffered with rheumatism and kidney disease, of a most painful and advanced type. I tried about everything, without relief, and expected the same result from "Blood Wine", but fortunately for me when I struck "Blood Wine", I struck the Rock of Gibraltar. It stood my every test and conquered my trouble and today I am a well man, due wholly to this great medicine. To my mind there is absolutely nothing that will compare with it, and I have no hesitation in advising any one in ill health to give it a thorough test. Fifty cents a bottle.

WEDDING

OF MR. J. H. FRANKLIN AND MISS LOIS E. GORBY

At the Gorby Residence on Buena Vista Street Wednesday Night—Hundred Guests Present.

On Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John B. Gorby, 91 Buena Vista street, as pretty a wedding, in all its appointments, as was ever seen in Newark, occurred when their daughter Lois Edith Gorby became the wife of John Henry Franklin.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. D. Y. Murdoch, pastor of the Methodist church at London, Ohio, in the presence of about one hundred guests.

Promptly at 8 o'clock, the notes of the bridal chorus from Wagner's Lohengrin, sounding from the front parlor, where Mr. Samuel Lamberson of Coshocton, presided at the piano, caused a hush to fall upon those assembled. Misses Bertha Tomlinson and Helen Murdoch stood at the door at the foot of the stairs down which the bridal party was to come, holding white ribbons. The bridesmaids were the first to appear in the persons of Misses Josephine Veach and Miss Atta Decker, who caught up the ribbons from the hands of the young ladies holding them, and walking to the stations in the bay window fronting on Indiana street, formed an aisle through which the immediate bridal party should pass. Miss Veach and Miss Beecher wore white organdie over silk, and carried magnificent pink chrysanthemums.

Rev. Murdoch came in and took his place, followed immediately by the groom and his best man, Edward King. The maid of honor, Miss Grace Gorby, a sister of the bride, preceded her. Miss Gorby wore pink silk mull, and bore white chrysanthemums. The bride, on the arm of her father came next and taking their places before the minister, the bridal party was formed complete, and presented a beautiful picture.

Rev. Murdoch then with impressive distinctness and earnestness spoke the words that bound John Henry Franklin and Lois Edith Gorby, in the holy and mystic relations of husband and wife. The bride was given to her chosen husband by her father, and the ceremony concluded with the ring ritual.

During the ceremony Mr. Lamberson produced an impressive undercurrent of melody, by his subdued improvisations on the piano. The effect was indeed, most charming and was done with artistic skill.

The bride was gowned in white silk crepe de chine over silk trimmed with Irish thread lace. Her flowing veil was caught in the hair with a gorgeous diamond sunburst, the gift of the groom.

After the ceremony and hearty congratulations, all present sat down while an elaborate wedding supper was served. Of course, the interest centered in the bride's table, in the spacious dining room. Here, as throughout the wedding decorations, white and pink chrysanthemums predominated. Festooned from the chandelier, and candelabrum in the center of the table smilax and holly were used, the general effect being very beautiful and artistic. At this table sat Mr. and Mrs. John H. Franklin, Misses Atta Beecher, Grace Gorby, Myrtle Gorby, Josephine Veach and Lillian Franklin Messrs. Ned King, Ed. C. Miller, William Schroeder, Samuel Lamberson and Dr. R. W. DeCrow.

During the evening punch was served which was most refreshing.

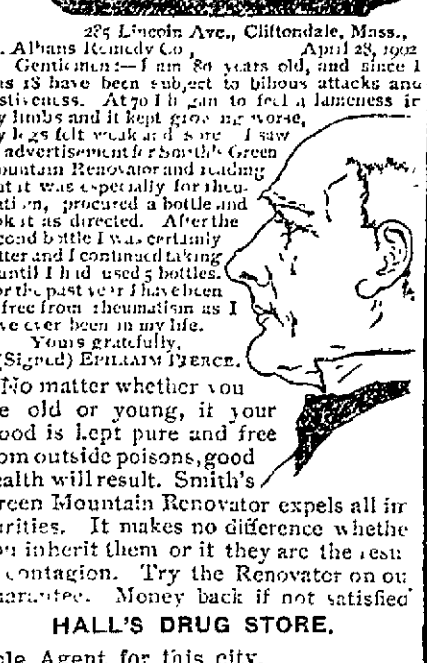

The favors consisting of rice, tied in various colored silk were distributed by Miss Lois Tappan.

The guests from out of town who attended the wedding were Mrs. Lyric Hubbard of Toledo, Mr. and Mrs. Will Tappan and daughter Lois, Mrs. S. W. Thornberry of Mansfield, Mrs. D. W. Cooper of Bellaire, Mrs. John Tomlinson and daughter Bertha, of Wheeling, Mrs. Willis Lumb and children, Chester and Bess of Zanesville, Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Gorby of New Castle, Pa., Miss Jessie Sprague of Cleveland, Rev. D. Y. Murdoch, wife and daughter Helen of London.

Mr. and Mrs. Franklin left at 12:45 Thursday morning over the Panhandle for Cincinnati. After a short wedding tour, they will return to Newark and immediately go to house keeping at 65 West Church street.

The groom is the son of Mrs. Helen S. Franklin and is employed at the

THANKSGIVING SERVICES

Rev. L. S. Boyce Preached at the Union Meeting Held in Plymouth Congregational Church—Outline of the Sermon—Special Services Elsewhere.

The following is a brief outline of the sermon delivered by the Rev. L. S. Boyce at the Union Thanksgiving services held at the Plymouth Congregational church:

"A citizen of no mean city."—Acts 21: 39.

Paul was being led to the castle for imprisonment, when he turned and said to the chief captain. "May I speak with thee?"

"What," says the captain, "can you speak Greek? Art thou that Egyptian which before these days madest an uproar and leddest out into the wilderness 4000 men which were murderers?"

Paul said, "I am a man which am a Jew of Tarsus, a city in Cilicia, a citizen of no mean city."

That same fervid loyalty of Paul has no reason for being dead today. Cilicia and Tarsus no longer boast of their privilege and reputation, but a nobler nation with grander cities has been born and reared upon a soil unknown to Paul—a nation of which none need blush to say "I am a citizen of no mean city." Wherever you go today, if you can beckon to the angry crowd and designate that you speak English, you need not fear to profess your citizenship for it will demand respect. Such a boast is light and noble. Patriotism is a nation's conscience, which approves the right deed and strengthens the action, and is pricked by the wrong deed and rings forth a tide of resolutions to reform.

We of the United States may boast that we are citizens of no mean city when we review our history.

Sanguine as were the Pilgrim fathers, they builded better than they knew, and God gave them more than they ever dreamed.

Every war has resulted in more than was expected at its beginning.

We may boast that we are citizens of no mean nation when we consider our territory and its resources, the wealth of inventions, the principles of government, the illustration of brotherhood which we have given the world.

But what we are called upon today

INTERURBAN

MAY NOW GET INTO CITY OF ZANESVILLE

Council Committee Told of an Agreement That Has Been Reached At Last.

(Zanesville Signal.)

It is announced that the representatives of the Zanesville Railway, Light and Power company and the Appleyard interurban syndicate have reached an agreement as to the terms by which the latter company enters the city.

The fact was announced to the special committee which met to consider the two propositions. It was stated that the Appleyards had secured a satisfactory arrangement for entering the city over the tracks of the city system and both companies now join in asking that the franchise of the Zanesville city company be extended under the terms proposed by Mr. Durban, withdrawing the ordinance, known as the Browning-Appleyard ordinance.

The terms of the contract between the rival syndicates are of course private, but it is certain that the arrangements take into consideration the tremendous value of an extension of the local street railway without any compensation to the city—if the city council will only grant it.

Dr. Caldwell's (Laxative) Syrup Pepsin

by far the most reliable and efficacious remedy I have ever known for dyspepsia and kindred stomach disorders. Mild and gentle in its action, it does not simply relieve, but cures permanently. It does not nauseate, as so many medicines are apt to do, but can be used in severe cases when almost anything else would distress one. Several of my friends who have used it have had the same very satisfactory results. I have, and therefore feel it is well worthy of highest endorsement.

Very truly yours,

M. C. DALTON, 311 Illinois St.

AUDITORIUM

"When We Were Twenty-one" Seen
Here This Afternoon and Also
This Evening.

When Henry V. Esmond wrote "When We Were Twenty-one," he conceived one of the most delightful comedies of modern times. There are situations in it which might with advantage be preserved and handed down to posterity.

One of the most delightful experiences the theatre goes of the day can enjoy, is to gaze with admiration at a magnificently perfect stage picture, such as every act of this comedy presents, to drink in with avidity the wealth of sparkling dialogue of which the play is composed, and to know that there is in the work naught of the degeneracy which is so dominant in a major portion of the plays of today. So pleasing and refreshingly pure is "When We Were Twenty-one" that we fancy we are treading through the Elysium fields of the day when the taint drama was a novelty and not an execrable superfluity.

The play brings forth all that is human in the audience. Smiles and tears intermingle throughout. There is a wholesome naturalness about the entire production that causes everyone who enjoys the best in dramatic art unequivocally to endorse it. It is a play for all people, the worldly wise and the religiously inclined, and an extraordinary stretching of imagination is not required to bring one to a realization of the fact that such things as are here portrayed really occur. At the Auditorium this afternoon and tonight.

Historical Novel.

Henry Altamus Company of Philadelphia, announce that they will publish early next year a historical novel having Benj. Franklin as the central figure which will be written by Chas. Felton Pidgeon, the author of Quincy Adams Sawyer, Blennerhassett, Stephen Holton and the Climax.

The title of the book has not yet been announced, but the work will deal with the long residence of Benjamin Franklin in Paris, as ambassador to the court of Louis XVI. The historical page at that time was full of prominent characters, and the ill-fated king; his indomitable queen; Vergennes, the French minister of foreign affairs; Neckar, the great financier; that erratic genius Beaumarchais, and the celebrated Voltaire, will move through the pages of the coming volume. The subject is one which gives the author greater scope than he has found in any of his previous works, and the publishers express the opinion that it will be a more attractive work and will appeal to a wider constituency of readers than any book published in recent years.

HORSES

Bought at Latonia by Bergen and McKenna to be Brought to This City.

(Cincinnati Enquirer.)

The train of 11 horse cars, a Pullman and a day coach, bound for New Orleans, pulled out from the loading chute at Latonia race track. There were about 150 horses aboard and nearly as many owners, riders, trainers, grooms and stable boys, and of course, a few hustlers, who, in spite of the fact that the detectives of the Louisville and Nashville railroad had inspected the train as thoroughly as possible, managed to tuck themselves away behind straw bales and in the loose hay.

The loading was done under the direction of Eugene Elrod, who was the charge d'affaires and the collector-general as well. That was one very important feature of the proceedings—that handing over of the kale seed before ponies were packed away. No horse was backed into a stall unless his passage was paid. The day has passed when the railroads will "collect at the other end."

William Bergen and Hugh McKenna of Newark, Ohio, purchased at Latonia the horses Henry's Sister and Kinchester. They will take them to Newark and race them on the fair circuit next season.

THE POACHER

This is the account Tom Clapper, a poacher, gave of himself when I visited him in jail. A rather pretty girl was in service at the Squire's—Squire Pell. To her Tom paid court. He was richer in presents than in reputation.

I fancy the girl gave him reason to think she liked him. At all events she did not return his advances. One evening Tom met the colonel in her room, somewhere about the grounds. Tom assured me that he passed them easily. But the next time he came across the colonel he was sure and managed to insult him and then to speak his mind, which was none of the colonel's. The colonel, you must know, was engaged at the time to be married to Squire Pell's only daughter—money, but no beauty. So he let Tom get the best of him, but from that day, Tom says, he felt he had an enemy and knew who that enemy was.

"Wasn't he a coward to hunt a poor fellow like that in the dark?" Tom said to me and declared he knew the colonel was a coward and was determined to be revenged and satisfied of it.

One night the colonel was in bed and heard his door yield its lock and open. You shall hear the rest in Tom's words:

"I knew that man was a coward, sir, so, once in the house and sure of his room, I knew I had him. I knew the beam's of the bed. I watched how the light fell two or three nights before. The moment I opened the door I threw the light—I carried a dark lantern—threw the light slap on his face. I saw him start. Did that man open his eyes? Deuce a bit. Slept as sound as teapence. I laughed to myself. Why, if he had got up it'd have been a fair struggle between us and I nabbed I certainly should 'a' been. But deuce a bit did he stir. Colonel Badger, thinks I, I'll hadder you. Well, I walked slow up to him, with the lantern in one hand and my pistol in the other, leveled at his head. There was he sleeping harder an' harder. I couldn't quite see his heart beat, but I'll lay my life it galloped."

I will spare you Tom's oaths. "Well, sir," he went on, "I'd half a mind at one moment to do for him outright. For a coward who's nothin' better than a villain what good's he for to live? Close down to his forehead I put the muzzle of the pistol. It was temptin' then. Just a hair an' he'd have had an extinguisher on his small candle. Lor', sir, his eyes were shut, but I'll wager he saw it all clear as day. An' there was the perspiration a-burstin' out of his forehead an' rollin' down his cheeks. I remember a large drop of perspiration on his nose. An' he pretended to sleep hard all the while! Why, the stupid ass, did he think I didn't know that a chap never sweated in his sleep—leastways not natural sweat? Well, I kept at that, drawin' the pistol away an' puttin' it close, for, I should think, forty minutes or more, but I took no account. I was cruel glad, to be sure, an' he perspired harder an' harder. Not a move right or left. I didn't speak. I thought to myself: 'Oh, you villain, I darsay you think yourself better than me, don't you? An' if you had me in your power now wouldn't you let loose? But I ain't such a coward as you. You shall bleed, my fine chap—in the pocket. That'll do.' For," said Tom to me, "I hadn't come there an' run the risk only to frighten the colonel. Two birds at one blow was always my game."

"So by an' by," Tom pursued, "when I thought I'd give my gentlemen a pretty good sweat for the benefit of his health, I began to ransack. I knew the whereabouts of his desk an' things. I collared the desk entire an' made as if I'd walk away. He had a chance then. The cowardly beast! There he stuck. He'd have liked to snore just to persuade me he was a-snoozin'. An' such a fellow as that to go misleadin' of young women! Ain't it disgustin', sir?"

Tom was a bit of a moralist, you see. Well, the end of it was that Tom, after giving the colonel another dose, made up his mind to quit the premises.

"Ay! I went, sir," said Tom. "Got off scot free. I just spoke those words in a solemn voice: 'Colonel, whether you're asleep or whether you're awake, just you keep quiet the next quarter of an hour, or you're a dead man. I ain't goin' yet, but my comrades are. I was all alone, sir; I never took a pal if I could help it, but I thought I'd tell him so, the coward, an' I'll stop outside the door. I says, 'tell them I said so.' You mind your eye, I says. 'I'm earnest.' An' then I touched his forehead with the cold iron an' moved back, waitin' at him still, an' his face shined with the cold sweat. He won't forget that hour I give him in a hurry. I knew very well he'd sleep on, but you an' so he did, an' I never heard nothin' till a month ago, when they pointed on me for it, an' here I am, goin' to see foreign lands, thanks to you, colonel. But you won't forget me, will you? An' everlastin' yours, Tom Clapper."

I told it all about his sweat an' pretendin' to sleep. I saw the people laugh. I'll swear the judge enjoyed it, for all he looked that grave you'd think he was a owl. He, Mr. Clapper, that's what I call a story, as you say. They'd call you a coward an' old blunderer, but they won't call you one in Van Dusen's.

And with this consolation Mr. Tom Clapper departed on his way to see the world. I told that the colonel's night more have been sufficiently miserable.

Notice to Parents, Pupils and Teachers.

The Great Seal drawing contest in the Public Schools, while creating unusual interest among the pupils and stimulating their best efforts to secure the prizes offered, is only a secondary matter when compared with the health of the pupils.

No teacher can do her pupils justice when the greater portion of them are suffering from coughs and colds. When one coughs THEY ALL COUGH and the confusion is sometimes so great that the teachers work has to be suspended. This could be avoided if parents would realize that GREAT SEAL PRUNE LAXATIVE will prevent Colds and GREAT SEAL COUGH BALSAM cures the Cough. A bottle of each kept in the house will prevent much of the confusion which teachers are powerless to silence. If we could only make you realize THE TRUTH OF THESE STATEMENTS AND THE MERIT OF THESE REMEDIES much good would be accomplished.

They are sold by all druggists under a positive guarantee of satisfaction or your money refunded, and a trial will prove them worthy of your confidence.

CAMEO RING

Stolen From Minister's House and Recently Found, May Release Him From a Penitentiary.

Indianapolis, Ind. Nov. 27.—James O. Parker, the attorney of Rev. William E. Hinshaw, the young Methodist minister who is serving a life sentence in the Michigan City Prison, having been convicted of murdering his wife while he was pastor of a Hendricks county church in 1895, has secured evidence which he believes fully corroborates the minister's story that his wife was killed by burglars. Some three years ago Edward Baney, an alleged desperado, confessed to the killing, but when taken before the grand jury went back on his statement. He said that, with John Whitney and Guy Van Tassel, he went to the house to rob it and being discovered by Hinshaw a fight ensued in which Mrs. Hinshaw was killed and Hinshaw shot with his own pistol. This tallied with Hinshaw's story of the tragedy, but Baney went back on his confession and the case was dropped. Mr. Parker has recently come into possession of a small gold ring with a cameo setting which was stolen from the house of Hinshaw the night of the tragedy. This ring was given to Lou Phillips by Whitney and at her death was given to her mother, from whom Parker obtained it. The ring has been identified by persons who knew Mrs. Hinshaw as the one she wore, and all the circumstances go to show that Baney's original confession was true.

Johnson's speeches as reported in the Cleveland Plain Dealer during the campaign upon an ordinary postal card. There are 3,896 words in the two speeches, and the writing is properly punctuated. Only with a magnifying glass can it be read. Farshing worked six hours and forty minutes writing the speeches. He used no glass and did most of the work by lamplight.

Novel Decision Regarding Dresses.

A London justice has just made an important decision regarding dressmakers' disputes. He will not have dresses tried on in court because he "had long since come to the conclusion that with ordinary dress a lady could wear a dress to make it look as if it did not fit," and he was also perfectly satisfied that "any milliner or dressmaker could pull it about and make it fit when it did not do so."

The interment was at Cedar Hill cemetery, where a short service was held, Rev. L. S. Boyce, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Newark, officiating. The friends present took a last view of the beloved face at the cemetery. The pallbearers were W. K. Sheppard, F. L. Haslet, C. E. Wickliffe and Judge E. M. P. Brister. Thus tenderly and lovingly was laid away in their final resting place, the remains of Addison English, one of nature's noblemen, who was sincerely loved in life, and will be deeply mourned in death. May God comfort the sorrowing widow and daughter in their sad affliction.

The ordinance as read the first time providing for the four new wards and showing the boundaries of each is published on page three of today's Advocate in connection with a map of the city of Newark.

A resolution offered by Mr. Jones, authorizing the finance committee to cause the ordinances of the city to be revised so as to conform to the requirements of the new municipal code was adopted.

THE ABOVE TABLE DOES NOT INCLUDE SPECIAL ASSESSMENTS.

DOG TAX—In addition to the foregoing tax, there is levied a per capita tax of $1 on male and $2 on female dogs, payable in one installment at the December collection.

SPECIAL NOTICE—Road receipts MUST be presented when December taxes are paid, if credit is allowed for same.

Remember, in asking for taxes that property stands on the Treasurer's books in the name of the owner on April 7, 1902. Taxpayers will avoid trouble and save time by bringing the last tax receipt, especially so if they have sold or purchased property within the year.

When asking for amount of your taxes by mail, please state clearly in whose name and in what township or town, school district or ward, the property is located and whether real or personal.

LIQUOR AND CIGARETTE TAX—Liquor tax payable one-half December 20, and one-half June 20, year ending fourth Monday in May, 1903. Cigarette tax payable June 20, annually.

WHEN TO PAY—Section 1091 of the Revised Statutes of Ohio requires one-half of the taxes charged on the duplicate, exclusive of Road Tax, together with the same, to be paid on or before the 20th day of December, 1902, and the remaining half on or before June 20th, 1903.

GENERAL INFORMATION—The entire delinquencies and one-half of all other taxes charged on the duplicates of 1902 are required to be paid on or before the 20th day of December, and the remainder on or before the 20th day of June next. Any person charged with taxes may, at his or her option, pay the full amount thereof before the close of the books at the December collection, but it is required to pay all road taxes, all delinquent taxes, and one-half of the current year's tax before the close of December collection and the remaining one-half of the current year's tax during the June collection. When one-half of the taxes charged on real estate is not paid during the December collection a penalty of fifteen per cent. shall be added (and this penalty does not belong to the Treasurer). See Section 2844, Revised Statutes, which says:

"When one-half of the taxes charged against any entry of real estate shall not be paid on or before the 20th day of December in that year, a penalty of 15 per cent. thereon shall be added to such half of such taxes on the duplicate," which together with the remaining half must be paid during the June collection. Real estate having delinquent taxes of 1901 or prior to 1902, remaining unpaid on December 20th, 1902, will be advertised, and if not paid before the third Tuesday of January, 1903, will be offered for sale. In event of no sale such property is forfeited to the state and will be offered at the biennial sale of forfeited lands.

In case of failure to pay the December payment of taxes on personal property the whole year's tax becomes due, which the Treasurer is then required to collect by distraint if necessary, as in case of delinquent personal property taxes for years prior to 1902 due and unpaid.

WHEN LIEN ATTACHES—Tax payers are advised that a tax year and a calendar year are not the same. The lien for any tax attaches the day preceding the second Monday in April of any year, but the first half of such tax is paid the following December, and the second half the June following the December.

IMPORTANT—Payment of taxes with check or checks is by courtesy of the Treasurer only. When checks are received for taxes and not paid on presentation, the taxes will be restored to the duplicate without notice, and receipts given declared null and void.

OFFICE HOURS—Office hours to the public, 8 a. m. to 4 p. m. on central standard time, the remainder of the day being absolutely necessary to perform the other essential clerical duties. The office will be closed on legal holidays.

NORFOLKS IN AGAIN.

Once Rejected. They Are Now In High Favor—A Bridal Costume. [Special Correspondence.]

New York, Nov. 24.—Some styles are accepted at once and liked, and some others are almost refused at first only to become very fashionable later. This is the case with the Norfolk reefer jacket. It is really not a pretty nor a graceful garment, but somehow it has become a great favorite with the young. It is most often made with the skirt as a suit, but it is also made of regular coat material and intended to be worn with any kind of dress.

There are two ways to make this stylish coat, one being to have three flat plaits down the front and back. Two of them are at the sides, reaching to the shoulder, and the other in front and center of the back. These are made separate from the body of the garment and stitched on, and a place is left open to slide the belt through. This loose belt is the distinguishing mark. All the rest is finished in orthodox tailor fashion. The coat is lined with fine farmers' satin, which is now preferred by all, as it wears so much better than silk or satin.

Among the new gowns made fashionable by the horse show, where the seal is set upon all the fine dresses and hats, is a dress of cloth or camel's hair having around the bottom a deep luscious made of several rows of hercules braid fagoted together with heavy saddlers' silk. The braids are graduated, the narrow ones at the top and the wide ones at the bottom. The sleeves to the gown have deep bells made in the same way, and at the neck there is a yoke of the narrowest widths, with a backing of cherry satin underneath. A belt is made in the same way, with the line of red showing through the fagoting. All the rest is black.

The use of fancy braids passes anything ever seen this season. The skirt illustrated has a neat trimming of one line of titan braid carried straight along until it comes between the folds of the skirt, where it is carried down into three diamonds and that way back up to the straight place. This is but one of a thousand different ways of using braid as trimming. Many devices are made all ready to sew on, which simplifies the matter very much. It is really the only rich and elegant trimming aside from lace and fur.

The new "nub cloth" is becoming a favorite, though its beauty lies in its rough and uneven surface. But it makes stylish suits. It is particularly well adapted to the Norfolk coat mentioned above. The surface is like a good quality of camel's hair, and the nubs are just little bunches of wool woven in so that they are equally unequal. This comes in all the colors of the season.

I had a private view of a bridal robe for one of the richest girls in New York, who is to marry a clever young doctor. The robe was made of rich and superb pearly de cygne in a dead-white. Around the bottom of the shaped flounce were five bins folds of the silk, surmounted by a piece of duchess lace three inches wide. This was cream color. Another row of this passed around the joined place of doune and skirt, and at intervals there were set bunches of artificial orange blossoms, one bunch downward and the other upward. This trimming went clear around the skirt. The waist opened in the back and was in blouse shape, lace alternating with bias folds. There were two rows of the folds and three parts of lace, the upper one being in the form of a yoke, with sleeve caps. The elbow sleeves were of the silk, with lace fore parts reaching to the wrists, tight. The collar was high and plain, covered with lace. No flowers or other trimming was put on the waist. A long veil of tulle is to be fastened to the top of the hair with a bunch of orange blossoms.

There is to be but one bridesmaid, and that one is the bride's fourteen-year-old sister. She has a lily silk frock of the palest baby blue. The skirt is plaited down to nearly the bottom, and so it forms a flounce. At the edge is a ruffle of the same, and there are tucks on this and cinchers of tucks on the skirt. The waist is a plain blouse one with a square neck. The sleeves are in bishop form, with very deep cuffs.

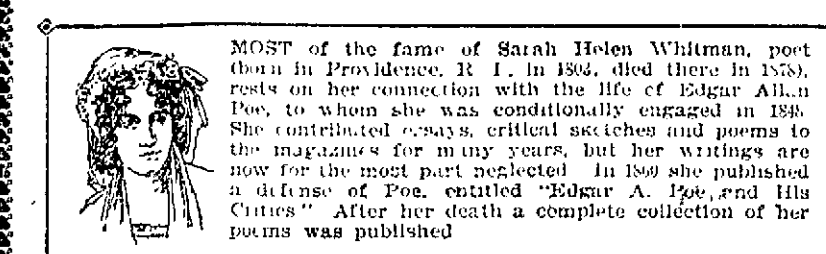

For a going away suit there is a flecked homespun, all gray with white flecks over the surface. The coat is somewhat like the Norfolk jacket just described. A cunning and stylish toque was made of the same material as the suit. A frock of white and pinked silk.

Woman's Sister?
Veezy—Has your sister come out yet?
Veezy—Oh, yes. She's been in a year.

AN OLD FAVORITE

A STILL DAY IN AUTUMN

By Sarah H. Whitman

MOST of the fame of Sarah Helen Whitman, poet (born in Providence, R. I., in 1832, died there in 1895), rests on her connection with the life of Edgar Allan Poe, to whom she was conditionally engaged in 1846. She contributed essays, critical sketches and poems to the magazines for many years, but her writings are now for the most part neglected. In 1890 she published a volume of poems entitled "Edgar A. Poe, and His Critics." After her death a complete collection of her poems was published.

I LOVE to wander through the woodlands hoary
In the soft light of an autumnal day,
When Summer gathers up her robes of glory,
And, like a dream of beauty, glides away.

How, through each loved, familiar path she lingers,
Serenely smiling through the golden mist,
Tinting the wild grape with her dewy fingers
Till the cool emerald turns to amethyst;

Kindling the faint stars of the hazel, shining
To light the gloom of Autumn's moldering halls;
With happy plumes the clematis entwining,
Where, o'er the rock, her withered garland falls.

Warm lights are on the sleepy uplands waning,
Beneath dark clouds along the horizon rolled,
Till the slant sunbeams through their fringes raining
Bathe all the hills in melancholy gold.

The moist winds breathe of crisped leaves and flowers
In the damp hollows of the woodland sown,
Mingling the freshness of autumnal showers
With spicy air from cedarn alleys blown.

Beside the brook and on the unnumbered meadow,
Where yellow fern-tufts deck the faded ground,
With folded lids beneath their pulpy shadow,
The gentian nods, in dreamy slumbers bound.

Upon those soft, fringed lids the bee sits brooding,
Like a fond lover loath to say farewell;
Or, with shut wings, through silken folds intruding,
Creeps near her heart his drowsy tale to tell.

The little birds upon the hillside lonely
Flit noiselessly along from spray to spray.
Silent as a sweet, wandering thought, that only
Shows its bright wings and softly glides away.

The scentless flowers, in the warm sunlight dreaming,
Forget to breathe their fullness of delight;
And through the tranced woods soft airs are streaming,
Still as the dew-fall of the Summer night.

So, in my heart, a sweet, unwonted feeling
Stirs, like the wind in Ocean's hollow shell,
Through all its sweet chambers sadly stealing,
Yet finds no words its mystic charm to tell.

MISS FILES threw her voice into its upper register and shrilled, "Master Ingram!" "Here!" replied that individual, still resting upon his neck after having tobogganed down the banister.

Miss Files hoisted him to his feet with one dab of her claws. "Get the hired man," she said. "Here's an agent wants to be put out."

"Hello, Inky," grinned the man at the door. "You're not going to serve an old friend that way, are you?" "Nixie," was Inky's clever response. Whereupon Miss Files elevated her evaporated features and retreated kitchenward.

"I'm selling windmills now," the young man explained, unstrapping his sample case. "This one is a bird."

"Then it will strike the O. M.," Inky asserted. "He's daffy on chickens and things; hatches 'em by machinery."

Over in the chicken house they found Mr. Allen on his knees tenderly trans-removed the pinfeathers from his right hand and tended it to the intruder. "Kindness to the youngster," said he. "Always puts me under obligations. What can I do for you?"

Favored with such an opening, the voluble agent made rapid headway and in thirty minutes had Mr. Allen booked for one extra large cyclone proof "Queen of the Air."

"The matter says you've wasted enough money on incubators to support a missionary," grinned Inky. "I guess the windmill!"

"That will do," interrupted his father. "Have you pulverized enough oyster shells for all the hens?"

It took Inky the remainder of the day to grind out a satisfactory answer to that question, and when he arrived five minutes late at the dinner table his hands still bore the marks of toil, but his conscience was clean. During the meal Mr. Allen surprised his wife by remarking on the approach of Thanksgiving and the pleasurable anticipation of their daughter's homecoming.

"I would suggest," he continued, "that you pay our little colleegian a visit, see that she is not studying too hard and then bring her home with you."

To Mrs. Allen the plan seemed good. She informed Ingram that he might accompany her.

Next day Mrs. Allen departed, having in tow the unwilling Inky. Miss Files quitted the manufacture of mince-meat sufficiently long to bid them an acrid adieu, and Mr. Allen said good-by with the air of a criminal who has secured a temporary stay of execution. It was evident that he had determined to make the best of his resolve, for as the train pulled out a strange caravan loomed in sight.

Astride an ancient horse rode a man in a brown ulster and long whiskers. Deprived of a portion of one limb, he had substituted a wooden peg, and with this sturdy member he beat a triumphant march on the apparent ribs of his steed. Three wagons followed, each bearing a monster streamer on which was painted "Queen of the Air" for the Hon. Densmore Allen.

Seeing them turn in at the cityway, Miss Files described her client's bird to the dogs and window-sitters and then safely to the upper story.

"Wouldn't trust myself outside a minute with that even a cold breeze," she remarked to herself. "And, while it is true, that he is a good man, he is a little bit of a fool."

And, while it is true, that he is a good man, he is a little bit of a fool.

And, while it is true, that he is a good man, he is a little bit of a fool.

And, while it is true, that he is a good man, he is a little bit of a fool.

And, while it is true, that he is a good man, he is a little bit of a fool.

entirely due to his activity that the windmill was erected in so short a time. The absent members of the family only returned in time to see a coat of white paint applied to the slender iron angles of the towering structure.

Mr. Allen welcomed them enthusiastically. "I thought the mill would be something of a surprise," he explained. "Our daughter," remarked Mrs. Allen, "is a credit to the family. Her instructors speak most favorably of her application and deportment. Your term report, Henrietta, will be very gratifying to your father."

And by this sign Mr. Allen knew that windmill as a subject of conversation was tabooed.

"Mr. Newtes, a returned missionary, will dine with us tomorrow," Mrs. Allen announced, with some pride. "I sent him a note of invitation last week, and he has accepted."

That night the automatic shutoff failed to work, and the wind wheel pumped so steadily that the tank in the attic overflowed, washing the plaster from the ceilings and the family out of their beds. Mrs. Allen arose, donned such dry raiment as could be found and read missionary tracts aloud to Miss Files, who was slightly deaf.

By early morning the flood had abated, and laborers were at once set to work removing all traces of the catastrophe. As soon as order was in a measure restored Miss Files began the preparation of what was to be her crowning effort in the line of Thanksgiving dinners.

At the hour of noon Miss Files took a final survey of the table and then rang the bell authoritatively. Mr. Allen appeared and Henrietta and Mrs. Allen.

"Where is Mr. Newtes?" anxiously inquired the last named. "He was not on that train," began Mr. Allen, and was then interrupted by a knock at the front door.

"I will receive him," said Mrs. Allen, and swept out of the room. "You are just in time, Mr. Newtes," was her greeting as the door swung open. "Dinner is just served. No, not a word. Come with me at once."

It was a decidedly questionable looking individual that was conducted into the dining room and introduced to Mr. Allen and Henrietta. Realizing his defects, Mrs. Allen was all the more gracious.

"Your appearance is much altered, Mr. Newtes," she remarked. "Before leaving this country as a missionary you were quite slender and, if I remember correctly, smooth shaven."

"Yesum," replied Mr. Newtes and began a combined attack on the turkey and cranberry sauce.

"You were stationed in Gebu Land, were you not?" continued his hostess. "I am anxious to learn something of the country and the people. Are they idolaters?"

"Sure thing," replied the missionary out of the fullness of his mouth. "It's a sight, ma'am, to see them only beggars dancin' round their Gebu god of a night. You see, Gebu is a kind of dope like tar. They dig for it and steal for it and fight for it just like we does for gold. A pot of it will buy all the native women you need to start a harem."

"I cannot imagine what is keeping Ingram," said Mrs. Allen. "Tell him that we are at the table and that I do not like his being late on such an occasion."

It seemed that Miss Files had hardly left the room until she was back again, screaming and wringing her hands. "Help, help!" she wailed. "He's up on top of that tower, and it's snowin' fit to kill! Oh, what's goin' to become of him, I want to know?"

A second later there were four white faces raised to where a small figure was swaying in the gale seventy-five feet above the ground. With the block, rope and swining seat of the painters Inky had hoisted himself to the top of the tower and then by some mischance had permitted the whole tackle to drop back to the earth, thus cutting off his only means of escape.

Mrs. Allen closed her eyes, and her lips moved silently. Mr. Allen was too badly frightened to think intelligently.

Henrietta suggested that they telegraph to the city for an extension fire ladder and have it sent out on the next train. At this juncture Mr. Newtes emerged leisurely from the house with every pocket bulging suspiciously.

"Well, I'll be hanged if it ain't me friend Inky up there plarin' goddess of liberty!" he exclaimed, taking in the

down to a jiffy."

Off went Mr. Newtes' shabby coat, and out of the pockets strewn a fine collection of silver forks and spoons. A still shabbier vest followed, and it gave up sundry rings, pins and watch-chains. Running to the foot of the tower, he kicked off his shoes, grasped one of the iron supports and began to climb upward with surprising agility. As he neared the top his strength began to fail and his hands left red stains upon the white paint.

After what seemed an eternity his head reached the level of the platform. There was a quick word of command, and Inky instantly mounted upon the broad shoulders of his deliverer. Then the descent began, slowly at first and then with rapidly increasing velocity. Ten feet from the ground the man's grasp relaxed and he fell heavily.

Into his mother's arms Inky was gathered unscathed. Mr. Newtes was considerably stunned, but quickly regained his feet and ruefully regarded his bleeding palms, which the frosty iron had divested of all cuticle.

"Mr. Newtes, your heroic act has earned a mother's undying gratitude," began Mrs. Allen.

"And if money can repay such a deed," said Mr.
